

Beware of Plague?

By Chancey

It's very possible a designer plague has hit the Upper Marina of Night City. Earlier this week an apparent sickness has started to affect numerous people in the district, with two possible casualties. A cover-up is suspected, although not yet fully confirmed.

Rumors have begun to circulate that the symptoms are similar to a flu, but with more extreme side effects, and supposedly short term. Temperatures exceeding 105 Degrees Fahrenheit, vomiting, diarrhea, stomach aches and cramps, delusions and even loss of consciousness.

According to one source, they allegedly saw someone bleeding excessively from the nose and another report claimed to have seen bloody diarrhea in a Bodega bathroom stall.

Further investigation is planned, as more leads and witnesses come forth. Viewers and listeners should stay tuned for a follow-up report, as evidence and accounts are verified.

Blood and Disappointment on the Field

By Jack "Flat Arm" Leibowski

It was lights out as usual for the Night City Death Dealers last night at McCartney against the San Francisco Red Shift, who shut us out in a 4-0 match leaving three of our Death Dealers in the ICU, and one deceased.

We've taken a liter beating this season, but somehow Coach Tilly Nakamura is still running the show (more like a massacre).

Fullback Jim "Compactor" Lewis played his last match, ironically crushed to death by Redshift Players 42 and 69, while trying to intercept Forward, Troy "Ice" Barnes, on his way to a goal.

Compactor was close to finishing his 3rd Season with the Death Dealers this year. But more importantly, this means the Death Dealers are in need of a new Fullback who won't crumple under pressure!

Killer Dies in Compromising Position

By Peter Fallon

The recent outbreak of murders in South Night City has come to a screeching halt, thanks to alleged vigilante justice across the Combat Zone.

The Prime Time Players' recent recruit had gone cyberpsycho after multiple un-regulated surgeries to make his appearance the same as the Richard Simmons, a famous aerobics instructor. Although the entertainer passed away during the 4th Corporate War, his aerobics lessons can still be found on old brain-dances.

After a string of "Jazzercising" incidents, leaving a whopping total of 19 dead, the Simmons poser was finally found. Discovered drowned, head submerged in an overfilled public toilet, he was pronounced dead on scene.
